What future for mountain railways: opportunities to grasp or costs to cut?

The Centennial of Ferrovia Trento-Malé offers a good opportunity to think about the role of local railway transport. This international meeting aims at providing a forum for a debate on the "modernity" of those railways which were built (but later partly dismantled) at the beginning of '900.

The meeting will provide a precious opportunity to recall the history of the Ferrovia Trento-Malé, to describe similar experiences both in Italy and in Europe, and to explain new projects which are being developed in the Trento area as well.
